Dominion Government Pure Bred Sire Purchase Policy.

Geo. Wrigglesworth, Secy. of the Agricultural Society, is in receipt of the following letter from the Dominion Department of Agriculture:

731732 Tegler-Bldg., Edmonton Alta.

Dear Sirs—

I am enclosing a form known as "Application Under Sire Purchase Policy of Dominion Live Stock Branch for a pure bred Bull. Bear or Ram."

I would ask you to kindly read carefully the conditions outlined in scheme, so that you may be able to advise and explain the nature of the Policy to anyone who may be desirous of taking advantage of same.

This Policy has been inaugurated for the purpose of encouraging the use of purchased sires, and the elimination of much of the cost and inconvenience heretofore experienced by those at outside points, whose desire it was to purchase a good sire. Applications were continually being received as to where these might be obtained, and in many cases we have been asked to make a selection and forward the animal. But the best we could do up to last spring was to direct the applicant to some responsible breeder, or to the different sales held during the year, there to arrange a purchase for himself. This incurred a great deal of both expense and inconvenience apart altogether from the original cost of the sire. By taking advantage of the privileges outlined in this Policy a large saving to the purchaser is possible.

The Dominion Live Stock Branch purchase only bull which have passed the tuberculin Test, and sell at first cost, plus the freight. Since the inauguration of this Policy a large number of applications for bulls have been received and supplied, and so far as we are able to judge satisfaction has been given in every instance.

Conditions as outlined in application forms define this Policy very clearly. Kindly become familiar with this scheme and make it known.

Yours faithfully,

Duncan Brown,

Dominion Live Stock Promoter for Alberta.

Any one interested in this scheme can obtain full particulars from Mr. Wrigglesworth.

One would almost think the Pied Piper of Hamelin was in town these nights the way the call of the bagpipes bring the people to the streets. The museum however is one of the C. P. R. painters.

On Sunday a large auto was burnt up near Crossfield. The car was standing by the side of the road and in the end was nothing but scrap iron the tire burning up the entire burnable parts of it.

The Town Council as had their property across the R. R. tracks opposite the C. P. R. depot, which they took over for taxes, surveyed into lots. They have decided to leave part of it for baseball and athletic grounds which was a move in the right direction and should encourage the Athletic Association in their efforts to "provide summer sports for the community. There was a great deal of difficulty in finding the original stakes, Mayor Chambers and Secy. Austin with the surveyors spending a lot of time in the search.

The correspondence between Dr. M. Clark, M. P. for Red Deer and Mr. Cremer is causing considerable discussion in the east. The stand taken by the two men is so directly opposed that the outcome of the two ideas will be closely watched all over the country. There is one thing sure that while Dr. Clark has some ideas regarding Free Trade that all cannot subscribe to his outstanding loyalty to Canada and his many adherence to his principle no matter if they cause him sacrifice to some extent should appeal to the right wise thinking people and he must not be lost to the public life of Canada. So far it looks as though he may not get a nomination in his old constituency but it is to be hoped that there will be some place found for him and that he will make his heard in the Council of the nation.

The political pot is beginning to boil in Calgary. There are only two candidates so far whose hats are in the ring. Didsbury is in both ridings east and west Calgary, the division being made by the R. R. tracks. In west Calgary Mr. R. B. Bennett the new Federal Minister of Justice is the government candidate while Labor's nominated Wm. Irvine history is the radical to represent them in one of the constituencies but which one has not been decided as yet as the farmers and labor are consulting together to decide about a compromise. The farmers will run a candidate in one constituency and the labor people in another but it has not been decided what action shall be taken yet by either side. The Mackenzie King Liberals are working hard to convince Mr. Duncan Marshall, former provincial Minister of Agriculture, to run in one of the constituencies.

Premier Meighen Makes Plain Statement Re Tariff

The following is a part of the speech of Premier Meighen at his Partage à la Prairie meeting last week when he opened the election campaign for the west:

Must Hoe Own Row

Canada was asked by the Wood Cremer platform to throw down tariff walls. This is a time when the United States was selling nearly eight hundred million dollars worth of goods to Canada every year while at the same time buying from Canada just a little over half that amount. Canada used to pay the balance, when it was far less, by borrowing the money in London. Now she actually had to buy the American dollars in New York and pay our balances over there. The result was that for two or three years back, Canada had to pay 12 cents for every American dollar. This meant that Canada had to pay them in exchange between fifty and seventy millions a year and the more goods bought from them, over and above what they bought from Canada, the more Canada would have to pay in exchange. In addition, the United States had lately enacted the Fordney emergency tariff in order to stop all farm products of which Canada was selling them $165,000,000 a year.

Mr. Wood and Mr. Cremer say that the right thing for us to do is to drop down the low tariff that we have today, and while our farmers cannot sell goods over there, to enable their farmers to sell goods in Canada against the product of Canadian farms.

"Oh, but you say, maybe if we take our tariff down, they would take theirs down?" My answer is this: "Ours was lower than theirs before they touched their tariff. My answer next is this:

"Even if they took their tariff down, they would likely put it up again just when they thought it would eat them out. In my event at the time that they are putting up the bars against this country one would scarcely fear that Canada would bow the knee and throw the gates wide open for the surplus produce of the United States. If we take that course it will be a sorry day for every town and every city in this country and it will be a sorry day very shortly after the great body of farmers of this country."

"Were we told by Mr. Fielding that if you had only adopted my reciprocity agreement in 1911 we would not have any Fordney tariff?"

To Punish Canada

But was there not a single individual in Canada who has spent as much as ten minutes in studying this question? He thought the Fordney tariff was put in to punish Canada for reciprocating reciprocity. The reason given by Mr. Fordney and by every speaker who supported the tariff were precisely the opposite. They said the influx of Canadian farm products was injuring the American farmer. The influx of Canadian goods of every kind must be curtailed. That is why they asked the Fordney tariff to pass. Who would say one suggested that if the reciprocity had passed and it as a consequence our goods went over there faster than they have actually done, the reasons for the Fordney tariff would have been removed? The actual reasons behind the Fordney tariff would have been far stronger than these were and would have sooner appeared.

Once Burned, Twice Shy

Reviewing recent tariff history Mr. Meighen said the United States offered Canada free wheat and flour if Canada would admit American wheat and flour free. That was reciprocity on a very small scale. The offer was accepted but what happened? About six months later, the United States put a duty of 35 cents a bushel on wheat and twenty per cent. on flour. Mr. Meighen said that the sale of Canadian flour in the United States had practically stopped and very little wheat was going over. "That," he added, "does not seem as if they would have bothered much about us even if we had passed the reciprocity pact. I never did think such a treaty was to our advantage. I do not think that is the direction we should move at all. They are our great competitors. We must manage our tariff unfettered wholly by arrangements with the United States. Any arrangements they make must necessarily be open to change at will and undoubtedly will be changed just when they believe it is in their interests to do so."

Must Hoe Own Row

The same thing happened in regard to potatoes and fish. The thing for Canada to do was to make her own path, hoe her own row and get her goods in the most direct way to the ultimate consumer. Anyone who thought that a régime of ours with a big competitor would be lasting was leaning on a reed. Particular effort has been made to convince the farmers that there was something inherently wrong in a protective tariff. It had been described as a special privilege. But was it not strange that, if a protective tariff were inherently wrong, it had been believed in every country of the world? Great Britain had adopted laws that constituted protection of the most effective kind. Were all the world free traders then the world would be that the nation with the biggest industrial system would gain at the expense of others. The whole world in the aggregate might not lose. The smaller nations would lose. But all the world was not free trade. It was protective, and any country which thought it could compete with its own barriers down, was spurning the lessons of two hundred years. "I pay no attention to the screaming of ambitious politicians who seek in pain to be believed in protection because of the influence of others and because of unworthy motives," said the premier.

Tobacco High Protection

"I do not now and never have believed in a high protective tariff." Continued on page 5.

The Didsbury Pioneer

Premier Meighen Makes Plain Statement

You know and the whole people of Canada know it. I do not believe such a tariff would be just to the West, where the industrial population is not so great as it is in Eastern Canada. I do not think such a tariff would be best for the whole country, because the spur of competition under fair conditions is good.

But Canada today and anything but high tariff. It averaged less than 15 per cent. on all goods imported, about 21 per cent. on dutiable goods alone. On farm implements the customs duty averaged only 11.6 per cent., the lowest of all the schedules of the tariff. Under the government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier the Canadian tariff for 15 years averaged over 26 per cent. on dutiable goods; and it had been reduced to an average of 21 per cent. That reduction had taken place at a time when the uncontrollable requirements of Canada required three times the revenue collected before 1911. Was there ever such bungling by the highest class men who said they wanted a revenue tariff, who wanted to reduce it, present tariff 21 per cent. in order to get a revenue tariff, when the same men maintained the tariff at 25 per cent. when they needed only one third of the revenue need today? "It always passes my comprehension," Mr. Meighen said, "how men can dare to use such language and solemnly to utter such rubbish in the presence of intelligent men."

MUST HAVE LEGAL FENCES

That the owner of livestock cannot be held responsible for any damage done by his stock if they invade a wheat field that is not fenced, according to the Fences Ordinance of Canada, was the gist of a decision handed out by Chief Justice Harvey of the trial division of the supreme court, on Friday, when he dismissed an action for $100 damage, preferred against B. G. of Sampsonton, Alta., and D. V. Cope of Calgary by Marmaduke Matthews of Sampsonton.

The defendants denied all the allegations contained in the statement of claim and also claimed that as the land was not fenced in 1917 or 1918 according to the laws set down in the Fences Ordinance of Canada, no action for damages along the lines suggested could not be maintained.

The plaintiff was unable to prove that the land mentioned in the claim was properly fenced at the time of the occurrences and as a result the chief justice dismissed the case with costs.

CRUEL WORLD

Along the quiet country lane the school marl jogs along; Her body is fragile, but her brain is going strong. She wonders how to make ends meet, no matter how so thrifty. With stockings at five bucks a pair, and winter coat at fifty. Twelve hundred dollars don't go far, at present cost of living. Although it's all spent on one's self, and nothing left for giving.

A poor chap walks close by her side, in a band he is a tiler. And all the girls in town say, sure this gink is a some feller. Nine hundred dollars—nothing more —as all his yearly pay. And he is feeling mighty sore, he lost ten bucks today.

He has got to get that back somehow, or he'll be in a hole. Also many other things out of his monthly dole; It makes a man fed rather bare, and something of a fool. At 27 with less pay than the female straight from school.

He gave the marm silk stockings to go to last night's ball; And of the truth were only known, himself wore none at all. So if you see that feller when you go to draw your pay Please treat him very kindly, for he's had no feed today.

Spend a Winter at the Olds School of Agriculture

Term Opens on October 27th, 1921

The courses offered afford the best opportunity ever given farm boys and girls to obtain a practical education.

The school term occupies only the slack months on the farm.

The courses are free. Boarding and rooming accommodation are arranged for by the school management, and rates will be very reasonable.

The farm in connection with the school maintains a good selection of livestock for judging purposes, and the demonstration of feeding and housing methods, and the experimental work carried on during the summer provides the best and most recent material on crops and crop production.

The school is equipped for the teaching of the elementary agricultural sciences.

There has never been a greater demand for trained men in the agricultural field than there is today. The unequalled conditions and value of all farm products at present make it essential that the successful farmer be equipped with every bit of available knowledge underlying the principles of production and marketing.

Every profession trains its men carefully in its own subject—what is taught in the Olds School of Agriculture is not limited to agriculture. Give the boy and girl a chance, it will pay to subscribe, in the improvement of farming methods, and in money.

CHAPTER VIII.

Into The Night

Harris and Allan drove straight so the engine, never looking back to the chair behind him, the worn man. On the way the farmer explained to his son what had taken place; that words had passed between them, but no blows had been struck, until Allan ap-peared.

"Well, if that's the way of it, I'm sorry I hit him," said the young man frankly, "and when I see him I'll tell him so." I'll tell him so," he burst out, but he had landed him a stony-winder on the chin, he continued, rudely rubbing his nose. "I guess we're even now."

"He might've broken your neck," said Harris. "You're too hot-headed, both of you."

"I can't make out what got into Jim, but he wouldn't answer my question. Jim's a good man, too. Perhaps the disturbing suggestion entered Harris's mind that the question had been asked by the boy, and he was well hoodwinked. "I'm afraid I'll call him up to-morrow," he said.

"He might've broken your neck," said Harris. "You're too hot-headed, both of you."

"I can't make out what got into Jim, but he wouldn't answer my question. Jim's a good man, too. Perhaps the disturbing suggestion entered Harris's mind that the question had been asked by the boy, and he was well hoodwinked.

"So it does," admitted Harris, who had not meant had not reflected that his hasty action in dismissing Travers would result in much more than anything else that had occurred. "Well, we'll have to come along with him. We'll go to Hill soon, and then you better ride over to Grant's or Morrison's. They'll be able to lend a man or one of the boys for a day or two. I'm afraid, though, that when Harris was planning a considerable venture with Riles, when he wanted a favour his thoughts instinctively turned to his other neighbour, Grant, and vice versa.

At noon Jim's chair was vacant, and the family sat down to dinner and a depressing silence. No mention was made of the morning's incident in the house, but the silence was broken, Harris feeling that he ought in some way to introduce the subject. "All Jim gone?"

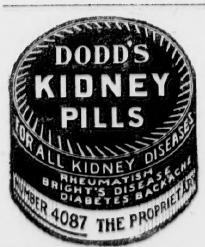

"Yes, he's gone," blazed Beulah, "you didn't expect he'd wait to kiss you good-by, did you?"

"One in the family is enough for that treatment, put it in Allan, whose swollen eyes and with neck bloused him, said Travers.

"He doesn't either. And if he did, none of your business, you big fool," she looked her brother straight in the eye, and then went on telling their own story, and repeated details at once, "you big coward!"

Allan bit his lip.

"You're about the only person, Beulah, I could say that and get off with whole skin. I suppose he told you I hit him before he was on the feet."

W. N. U. 1288

"Well, he didn't. He didn't say you hit him at all, but he couldn't do it. He's too kind, though. And when he hit you just have taken someone, you'd never have got near enough to leave a mark on him."

"Jim's quite a hero, all right. It's too bad he's gone."

"It's a good job he's gone," said Harris. "In the way Beulah talks things have gone far enough. I don't want my daughter marrying a farmer."

Beulah's daughter didn't say much.

"Yes, I know, but things are different now. I look for something better for Beulah."

He was a character of Harris, as of thousands of others, that, although a farmer himself, he looked for "something better" for his daughter.

He was resigned to Allan being a farmer, his attitude being, "If a man's fit for nothing else, let him be a farmer."

He was a man who, since from the possibility of separation. But for his daughter—no. He had mapped out no career for her; she might marry a doctor, a lawyer, a merchant, a tradesman, even a minister, no, that's right. It is a peculiarity of the agriculturist that, among all professions, he holds his own in the world's opinion. As a rule, he is held in high esteem. He believes that everybody else makes an easy living off the farmer, and, much as he and many of the present generation feel for the farmer, the agriculturist holds his own in the world's opinion.

In later years has come a gradually broadening conception that farming after all calls for brains as well as muscle, and that a man can earn a comfortable living from Nature has as much right to hold up its head in the world as the experimenter in medicine or the lawyer, saying, "I am a man of science."

Beulah was a woman of the cityward migration; the farmer himself is looking for "something better" for his daughter.

"Jim was a good man," persisted Harris. "Don't you think you were—well, perhaps a little hasty with him?"

Harris sat back. He was his wife's best friend, but twenty years and more she had been faithful in the discharge of that duty. That she should suggest an unspotted out of harm's way with his inclination of a boy of all this age, he could hardly bear to see it, which if permitted to flourish might lead to dangerous prouesses.

"So come on to take his part, too. It's a strange thing if I can't handle my hired help without advice from the house."

Harris flushed at the remark. Any open quarrel with his wife, for she still thought of the man and woman to her left and right as "the children" was more painful to her than any sounder cold, but he had to be true to his wife.

He could no longer afford to change the subject, to follow the line of least resistance, and forced the incident as quickly as possible. That had been his first course of action after the first few years of their married life. At first they had been troubles and difficulties, but she had gradually adjusted herself to his methods, and they lived a quiet, peaceful, though somewhat lonely, life.

She had, however, always been a silent witness to the man's ways, and he never interrupted the current of his talk.

Takes Electricity From Air

New Generator Consists of Wire, Iron and Minerals.

Demonstrations have been made on the streets of Denver of a new electric generator that is claimed by the inventors to take electricity from the air.

The inventors are J. E. Ammann, of Denver, and his brother, C. E. Ammann, of Spokane, Wash.

To demonstrate, the brothers borrowed an old electric auto, took out the batteries and after roping their new "atmospheric generator" fast, they got in and rode off at a high speed.

"There is nothing inside the drum that moves; the contents consist only of iron, wire and minerals," says G. E. Ammann.

"It can be used to drive any electrical apparatus and can be made in any size."

The brothers are closely guarding their secret, and even, take their "brainchild" when it is not in use, to the room in the Argonaut Hotel. So far the brothers have not offered to sell their proposition.

Electrical men in Denver are waiting "to be shown," but they grant the thing works.
